

Expecting the unexpected:

STAYING AHEAD IN
OBSTETRIC ANAESTHESIA

Saturday 14 June 2025
HILTON HOTEL SYDNEY

Welcome

Two thirds of us work, at least partly, in the private sector and a good proportion of those hospitals mandate our participation in an on-call obstetrics roster. Sometimes it feels like the boundaries are being pushed. Those of us working in the public system see some of the most complicated obstetric cases requiring anaesthetic intervention. It's hard to keep up.

In May 2024 the findings and recommendations from the NSW Parliamentary Inquiry into Birth Trauma were handed down. 4000 women, parents and stakeholders, made submissions to the NSW Inquiry with 1 in 3 women reporting their birthing experience to be traumatic. The inquiry has led to a push for a national response to address birth trauma and systemic failures in maternity care, to ensure all soon to be parents have access to evidence-based antenatal education and for informed consent in maternity care to be enshrined in law.

We are lucky to have Dr Morgan Edwards join us as our international speaker. Morgan is the president of the New Zealand Society of Anaesthetists, the society's representative on New Zealand's National Obstetric Anaesthetists network and obstetric anaesthetic lead at Te Whatu Ora Waitematā in Auckland. Morgan has a podcast for obstetric patients where she seeks to educate patients in the antenatal period.

Our program presents the new guidelines on the management of post partum haemorrhage and an update on assessing platelet function in pregnancy (did we say it's hard to keep up?). The program has been designed with annual CPD requirements in mind. The opening plenary session will fulfil all delegates 2025 cultural safety requirements, workshops are focused on emergency response activities and the closing session will look at obstetric anaesthesia under the measuring outcomes microscope and allow delegates to undertake a critical reflection. I hope you are free to join us on 14 June and participate in what we envisage to be a very enlightening meeting.

Dr Kim Gray and Dr John Neal

Obstetrics, morbidity and mortality session + critical reflection

Forming part of the 2025 NSW ACE Winter Meeting, delegates that attend the obstetrics morbidity and mortality session can choose to complete a critical reflection of the session. The information and documentation to complete the critical reflection will be sent to meeting delegates at the conclusion of the meeting. Delegates who complete a critical reflection of the session will need to upload it to their ANZCA CPD dashboard.

Continuing professional development (CPD)

Participants in the ANZCA CPD Program will have the activities in which they participated automatically allocated to their CPD portfolio following the conclusion of this conference.
